For young adults with learning differences, college may not seem like a viable option.

- Statistics show that students in college who have a diagnosed learning disability have higher dropout rates than those of their peers.
- Only 35% of college students in Arizona are earning their degrees, and the percentage is even lower for students with learning differences

Arizona Board of Regents, 2013

Quite the opposite is true! NorthBridge students OUTPERFORM their peers without learning differences!

With the Guidance, Mentorship, Academic Support and Community of the NorthBridge program, our students are:

- 23% more likely to pass their classes.
- 30% more likely to stay in school and complete their degree.

College IS possible for students who learn differently!
